Hot August Nights

During an evening night on August 1, 1986, the Reno-Sparks Convention Center was bursting at the seams with hundreds of visitors...It was that night when nostalgia was unleashed among an audience who excitedly relived their childhood years of the 50's and 60's- a time of innocence, prosperity, cars and the birth of Rock and Roll. The weather was HOT, the month of AUGUST was right, therefore, HOT AUGUST NIGHTS was born!

The aim of Hot August Nights was to fill a void in tourism in Reno during the month of August and to raise money for local charities. The first concert was held in the Convention Center parking lot where most hadn't danced to "that" music, to a live band, under the stars, since high school. The memories flooded back and so did the desire for more! The first year of Hot August Nights was more of a nostalgia event than a car event. But it was the car parade that was the highlight of the Event for the participants and the crowds who thronged Virginia Street. The car owners were thrilled to show off their cars. They'd never had so many people "oohing and aahing" over their "works of art". It was a proud moment for classic car owners.

Classic 1950's Cars

Cars in the 1950s symbolized America's optimism as it emerged victorious from World War II and raced into a new age of consumerism and international influence. Others brought glitz and horsepower to the masses. Below are a few of the classics you might recognize that marked a pivotal time in the automobile industry:

- 1954 Cadillac Eldorado
- 1955 Porsche 365 Speedster
- 1952 Fiat 8V
- 1951 Mercedes Benz Type 300
- 1955 Ford Thunderbird
- 1955 Studebaker President Speedster
- 1952 Bentley R-Type Continental
- 1955 Citroen DS
- 1958 Buick Limited
- 1956 BMW 503

Mexican Street Corn

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup (60ml) mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup (60ml) sour cream or Mexican crema
- 1/2 cup (110g) finely crumbled Cotija or feta cheese, plus more for serving
- 1/2 teaspoon ancho or guajillochili powder, plus more for serving
- 1 medium clove garlic, finely minced (about 1 teaspoon)
- 1/4 cup finely chopped cilantro leaves and tender stems
- 4 ears shucked corn

1 lime, cut into wedges

Directions

- Light 1 chimney full of charcoal. When all charcoal is lit and covered with gray ash, pour out and spread coals evenly over half of coal grate. Alternatively, set half the burners of a gas grill to high heat. Set cooking grate in place, cover grill, and allow to preheat for 5 minutes. Clean and oil grilling grate.
- While coals heat, combine mayonnaise, sour cream or crema, cheese, chili powder, garlic, and cilantro in a large bowl. Stir until homogeneous and set aside.
- When grill is hot, place corn directly over hot side of grill and cook, rotating occasionally, until cooked through and charred in spots on all sides, about 8 minutes total.
- Transfer corn to bowl with cheese mixture and use a large spoon to evenly coat corn on all sides with mixture. Sprinkle with extra cheese and chili powder and serve immediately with lime wedges.

CORNY KNOWLEDGE: FACTS ABOUT CORN

- On average an ear of corn has 800 kernels in 16 rows.
- As of 2012, the United States produces 40% of the worlds total harvest and is the biggest corn producer in the world
- Corn comes in various colors including blackish, bluish-gray, purple, green, red, white and yellow.
- Corn and its by products are also found in many non-food items such as fireworks, rust preventatives, glue, paint, dyes, laundry detergent, soap, aspirin, antibiotics, paint, shoe polish, ink, cosmetics, the manufacturing of photographic film, and in the production of plastics.
- Almost all of the rest of the world calls corn Maize.

According to Jim

Recently, a friend gave me a small book of poetry, titled "55 and Counting" by David Waldon. It's Waldon's entries into the Stockton Record's contest of writing of 55 words, no more, no less. I've often read Michael Fitzgerald's column in the Record, but I paid no attention to the contest. Such a word limit is not my style and not something I'm likely to read.

Then this book came my way. I realized that poetry could be fashioned in the limits of the contest. Waldon grew up in the Stockton I've known, and, at first, those images of the city held me. Then I got farther into the book and found that he'd written about so much else. Some of the poems, especially about love, touched my heart. I wish I could have known him.

When unexpected gifts such as this book come my way, I've learned that they always have something for me. They lead to thoughts I wouldn't otherwise have, connections I wouldn't make, understanding I wouldn't find.

Another kind of unexpected gift was the visit by two ladies, Jehovah's witnesses, who gave me a "Watchtower" to read. Interesting material. Though I don't agree with a lot of it, I like the way the articles are written in developing their ideas. Then it occurred to me that I wasn't always so tolerant of other's beliefs. Once, I would have turned them away with a shrug and a "not interested." Now it seemed right to at least listen.

I thought about this. What had changed in me? I used to feel uneasy talking to "true believers" about their favorite issues. It seemed that they were right and I was somehow wrong, and they'd prove it to me. Often I had no answer other than the sense I didn't feel that way.

Years ago, I took a class at Delta College called "God and Man". It drew a wide range of people, fundamentalist Christians, Wiccan witches, atheists, and so on. A large part of the class was presentations, followed by lively debates. Amid the clash of beliefs, the instructor kept it from becoming just arguments. He sat, listening, with eyes half-closed and a Buddha-like smile. Once during a break, I asked him what he believed. "I have my own understanding," he said, and nothing more.

I often think about him. He had no need to prove himself. Letting others believe what they want, he took what he could use and left the rest. That's been the key for me. Instead of dwelling on all the ideas I don't believe, I've found what I do believe.

The only thing I really know about God is what I've experienced of God. All the rest is something told to me. Listening to the tales of others has been useful. It's part of learning. When something meets my condition, I accept it. That's what has changed in me. I'm comfortable in what I've been shown. When others see life differently, I can listen without being troubled.

In the words of my old teacher, I have my own understanding.

All my Best,
Jim

LOCAL LODI FACTS: BIRTHPLACE OF A&W ROOTBEER

Lodi is the birthplace of A&W Root Beer, the first batch was made in 1919 on a hotdog cart during a parade. On June 20, 1919, Roy W. Allen opened a roadside root beer stand in Lodi, California, using a formula he purchased from a pharmacist.

A&W Rootbeer has grown from its humble Lodi roots and is now distributed around the world. In 1993 the soda was absorbed into Cadbury Beverages, a company now known in the US as Dr. Pepper Snapple Group.
